

The Missing Necklace

Yesterday, Ben and Betty went for a walk in the park together. When it was time to go home, Betty suddenly cried out, “Oh no! My silver necklace is missing! I must find it.”

There was a thin man with curly hair working in the park. Betty asked him, ‘Excuse me, did anyone see my silver necklace?’ The man shook his head and said, ‘No, I haven’t.’ Betty felt very panicked and sad because the silver necklace was the birthday present from her mum. It was very important to her.

Ben and Betty walked around the park to look for it. Ben pointed and said to Betty, ‘Look! There’s a young woman in a purple, spotted dress. She was holding something in her hand.’ Then, Betty rushed over and asked, ‘Did you see a silver necklace?’ ‘No, I didn’t,’ the woman said. Betty felt sad and went back home disappointedly.

Finally, when she arrived home, she saw her necklace resting safely on her desk. She felt incredibly happy and relaxed.
