Last weekend, Betty and her friend Ben went to the park to play. It was afternoon already. When they were tired and wanted to go home. Betty found that the necklace she was wearing was gone. She felt scared and worried, so Ben asked, 'What happened, Betty?' Betty answered, 'I lost my necklace that I was wearing.' Then Ben suggested to go find the park office to ask the officer.

When they got to the park office, they asked the officer in a uniform and with curly hair. They asked the officer, 'Hey mister officer, do you see my necklace somewhere?' 'No, I don't, but maybe I can help you to find it.'

Then they split up and started finding the necklace, the officer went to the gate of the park to help find it. But then Ben noticed a woman sitting on the bench was very nervous. Then, they went to the woman and asked, 'Did you steal my necklace?' 'No, I didn't. Don't you remember? You gave it to my daughter' Betty answered, 'Wait what?' 'I'm your friend's mother, you gave my daughter a necklace as a birthday gift. She was scared that she might lost it, so she gave it to me.' 'Oh, how can't I remember that?'

Finally, Betty and Ben went home to do the rest of the homework.
